Should I outsource my legal needs to a traditional law firm?

Should I hire an in-house lawyer?

Traditional law firms are exceedingly expensive; in-house counsel can come with limitations to the scope of expertise, while also being high-priced.

Why choose between two options that don't cut it for your business needs?

Option 1: The Traditional Law Firm

Are you prepared to sign up for an uncertain and potentially wild ride?

Your final bill for external legal services with a traditional law firm is unclear at the start. It depends on how many hours they spend on your file, at $500/hour, or more. Not to mention that all costs are passed on to you from lawyers at every level of seniority, down to the printing fees.

The Aluvion Law Option

When all you want to do is grow your business, working with a traditional law firm can be frustrating, time-consuming and expensive. Virtual In-House Counsel™ offers the same expertise and quality service as traditional Bay Street law firms but at roughly 50% of their billable rates.

Option 2: Hiring In-House Counsel

Is it efficient to double up on your legal fees?

A full-time lawyer will run you an average salary of $100,000 per year, plus benefits, severance commitments and other overhead costs. You'll still need to engage an external law firm to support areas in which your in-house lawyer doesn't practice.

The Aluvion Law Option

Are you prepared to pay your in-house lawyer to manage your outside counsel? Virtual In-House Counsel™ offers access to a deep pool of legal talent that's always up to date on your file, for a fixed fee.
